been almost four hundred sent to the hospital from the Catania by the quarantine officers, although Dr. Ireland and the other surgeons on the ship said there was no necessity of sending all of them there.

The knowledge that there was plenty of good things to eat at the hospital probably made many of the men feel sick enough to be taken there as soon as they heard of it, but they were carefully looked over by the hospital surgeons and almost three hundred of them sent back to the detention camp. Conditions at the hospitals improve daily. Eleven nurses came from Boston to-day, and thirty men and women nurses came from other cities. More are still needed, however.

PLENTY OF HOSPITAL SUPPLIES

In the matter of supplies the hospital is get-ting all it needs, and Colonel Forwood said he had $9,000 available for the purchase of any had $9,000 available for the purchase of any supplies whatever, the fund arising from the 60 cents allowed under the War bepartment's regulations to sick soldiers in the hospitals for the purchase of food other than Army rations. The hospital is also, through the improved means of transportation, receiving plenty of lumber for the extensions that are being added to the annex. Quartermaster Knight sent a hundred loads up to-day, and sent forty-five up yesterday. But that sent yesterday was secured by quartermaster-sergeants for the construction of floors for the tents of the well soldiers, and only a few loads reached the hospital. Such a diversity of the construction of the secure of the secur

The regiment will pro-ceed, probably to-morrow, to Buffalo, its home city, and upon arrival there the others will receive leaves of absence and the men forloughs for thirty days, at the expiration of which they will be mustered out of the service of the United States. Governor Black, accompanied by Representative

Mr. Alexander informed the soldiers in the course brief address, that they were soon to be mustered out of the service, the men cheered for joy. Upon their return from Camp Alger Governor Black and Representative Alexander called on Secretary Aiger, who gave them assurances that the 85th would be relieved from service at once. night they met Adjutant-General Corbin at office, and the order for the mustering out of the regiment was issued. It is as follows:

to Washington and to Camp Alger, said.

I am quite well satisfied with the results of my visit here. Four of the New-York regiments—the 2d, 8th, 71st and 65th—have already been ordered mustered out of the service, and orders for the mustering out of three more of the remaining eleven New-York regiments will be issued as soon as we can determine what regiments ought to leave the service. It has been decided also to send the lath Regulars from Camp Wikoff to Fort Porter, at Buffelo, as soon as possible.

"The condition of Camp Alger is not so bad by a good deal as I had been led to believe. The water is poor and the supply imadequate, but otherwise the troops are ketting along reasonably well."

The Governor said it had been decided definitely to establish a Government hospital for sick solidiers on Fire Island. It will be a hospital for general use, and not particularly for the New-York sick. The Governor thought most of the New-York men who were ill could be furloughed and sent to their homes.

Governor Black will make a pretty thorough in-

Governor Black will make a pretty thorough investigation of Camp Thomas, where the 8th internal 14th New-York are. He has not decided yet whether or not be will visit the camp at Hunts-ville, Ala., before he returns North.

Now that the war is over, if we do not take the first opportunity to return, but, instead, go to some point on garrison duty and come back a couple of years hence, we may find others in our places, retained regularly, the inference having been drawn by our employers from our acts that we did not wish to resume our old work.

A member of the Miss Regiment said he thought opinion on the subject of mastering out was very much divided. In his regiment he knew of a good many who would like to go about the country doing garrison duty and seeing something of service, now that they were in it. ADVENTURES OF THE AMATEUR TARS WITH SAMPSON'S FLEET.

The United States auxillary cruiser Yankee steamed up through the Narrows yesterday morning and dropped her anchor off Tompkinsville. It was not long before the news of her arrival reached the city, and as several of her officers and all of her crew are members of the New-York Naval Reserve the craft was thronged with their friends the afternoon. The Yankee had an eventful cruis during the six weeks that elapsed between the time she left this port and her return yesterday and the temporary tars were only too willing to spin long yarns of their adventures for the benefit of their friends. No shore leave was granted yes terday, and, although the immediate future of the Yankee has not been announced, the Navat Reserves aboard her are confident that they will soon mustered out of the service. Incidentally they are not sorry to quit the life on the bounding deep, now that the war is over.

The Yankee is commanded by Commander Wil-lard H. Brownson, U. S. N., who was sent to Europe before the war began to buy warships for the United States. Her other officers are as follows: Lieutemant John H. Hubbard, executive officer; Lieutemant W. G. Cutler, navigator; W. Butler Duncan, jr., senior watch officer; Lieutenant John H. Barnard, watch efficer; S. Dana Green, lieutenant of the junior grade, W. De W. Dimmock, en sign; Ensign Charles L. Andrews, signal officer and captain's aid; Dr. J. P. McGowan, surgeon; J E. Gilbert, entef engineer; E. S. Van Wart, assistant engineer; Lieutenant Louis A. Frothingham best known as Harvard's old football player, in command of the marines, and J. E. Biscoe, pay-

The Yankee sailed from New-York on July 12, carrying 400 tons of ammunition for the fleet in Cuban waters. She touched at Norfolk and took n 150 tons more ammunition, and left th July 17, arriving at Guantanamo on July 22. After distributing part of her ammunition to the ships of the fleet she satied for Ponce to deliver the rest of it to the battle-ship Massachusetts. When off Haytl about thirty miles the Yankee met the Dixle, which signalled that the Massachusetts was returning to Guantanamo, whereupon the Yankee turned back and indulged in a race with the Dixie. According to the yarn that was spun yesterday, the latter was

At midnight on August 2 the Yankee sighted the British steamer Burton and hove her to. An officer was sent on board to find out from the captain her identity. He said that the ship halled from Barry England, and exhibited a letter from the United States Consul at Guadaloupe saying that the Burton was carrying coal for the ships that were going to take the Spanish soldiers from Santiago to Spain. "I sin't the feller you want," said the captain of the Burton. "You want the Marie. She left TRIP OF THE SAN MARCOS. Guadaloupe five hours ahead of me. She's got con traband aboard." So the Burton was allowed to proceed. At 8:29 or the evening of the next day the Yankee fell in with the Marie and signalled her to heave to. The Marie displayed no anxiety to comply with the order until blank shots had been fired at her. Her captain told the officer who went aboard her that the Marie hatled from Bergen. "I ain't the feller you want," said he. "You want the Eurton. She's carryin' contraband."

But Lieutenant-Commander Brownson was obdurate and took the Marie into Guantanamo. miral Sampson thought the Marie and the Burton | said: were two vessels that had salled from Cadiz three months ago, and were trying to get coal into Santibeen destroyed. He hustled the Yankee out after the Barton again, and it took Lieutenant-Commonder Brownson only four hours to find her. She take was taken into Guantanamo Harbor. Both the commers were afterward allowed to go free.

On August if the Yankee was ordered to watch for the steamship Montserrat which was expected to attempt to escape from Matarzas with a large amount in Spanish gold. One report had it that General Elanco would be absard the Montserrat. The Yankee took up a position near Castle Island light, at the southern end of Crooked Island Fassage. The lixle stationed hersoif at the other end of the passage and here the two auxiliary cruisers remained until the morning of August II, when they sighted the fleet on its way to New-York and were informed that the protocol had been signed. Then they returned to Guantanamo, cheering the his warships as they passed.

Last Tuesday the Yankee got orders to sail for New-York and there was a joyful crew aboard in consequence. Wednesday morning bright and early the Yankee sailed from the harbor of Guantanamo, her band playing "Home. Sweet Home," and the pixte's band responding with "Dixie" and "My Maryland, My Maryland.

DEATH IN PARTICULAR. There is little that goes on in this world of mingled happiness and suffering that we don't have a whack at," said a delegate to the Central Labor Union yesterday, and the history of the organization certainly bears out his statement.

At the Central Labor Union's meeting yesterday William Parley, of the Hexagon Labor Club, spoke of the freatment of the soldiers, and a lively dis-cussion followed. Delegate Porley said that many of the soldiers who had volunteered to defend the State and Stripes had died, not from Spanish bullets but from neglect, and he thought that those who were responsible for it should be bunished. He wanted the Central Labor Union to pass a resolution condemning the dovernment for neglectadded that he had a number of friends among the Delegate O'Erlen thought that such a resolution would be too sweeping in its character, although he was of coinion that there had been culpable negligence at some of the camps. He quoted from a military camp, who complained that the food he and his comrades received was unfit to eat. Delegate O'Brien said that if the letter had been written from Santiago there would be no cause for complaint, but the writer of it was in a dovern-ment camp in the United States, far from the seat complaint, but the writer of it was in a Government camp in the United States, far from the seat of war.

Delegate Johnson also thought that the resolution would be too sweeping, and he proposed as a substitute that the secretary be instructed to write to President McKinley urging him to make a speedy investigation of the charges madius some of the dovernment officials. Delegate Farley accepted this as a substitute. Continuing, Delegate Johnson said he did not think that any blame could be attached to President McKinley or to the Secretary of War, but those who were guilty of starving men to death should be tried for murder.

Delegate Johnson state the interests of humanity, but was brought about by the machinations of capitalists who wanted to raise a large army to shoot down workingmen in time of strikes. Delegate Jolly's remarks were not well received, and he quickly substited.

Delegate Warner snoke of the death of Jacob Frink of the 9th Regiment who was a member of his union. He said that Mr. Frank's death was caused by a squabble among Army surgeons, and that his life could have been saved by the amputation of a limb. He moved as an amendment to Delegate Johnson's resolution that the President be requisited to investigate Mr. Frank's death and see that the men responsible for it were punished.

It was decided to make a separate resolution of Delegate Warner's motion, and both resolutions were then adopted.

The Texas men on the San Marcos were outspoken in their condemnation of Captain Merrill, and talked, or rather whispered, quite freely about his actions. They whispered because the captain had ordered the men not to talk above a whisper. Sergeant McCloud, of Company D, 3d Texas Volunteers, was formerly city editor of "The Beaumont (Tex.) Daily Enterprise." He said: A large proportion of the suffering and dis-

"A large proportion of the softering and de-comfort on the transport is traceable to Captain Merrill. He was decidedly profane, and swore at the men at every opportunity. As an exam-ple, he wanted a lieutenant to come to him, and at the men at every opportunity. As an example, he wanted a licutenant to come to him, and he said to him. Damn you, come here. The licutenant walked toward him, but did not come fast enough, and he then said. 'Run, damn you,' I say run. Do you hear me, damn you.'' All our food was cooked on the main deck, forward of the hospital, and we were compelled to eat it there. Several of the invalids went up on the upper deck with their food, where they could get a breath of air. Captain Merrill saw them, and shouted. 'Damn you, go below and eat your fodder. Do you hear?''

"The men of our regiment are ne My all coilege men, and we were not accustomed to this treatment. We had hard enough time at Key West, where we spent most of the time policing the camp for the Regulars, and, in fact, doing all the dirty and hard work. Many of the memiliers of our companies on this boat are business and professional men, and were compelled to work alongside of negro laborers. We wanted to get to the front and fight.'

J. N. Scott, of "The Paris (Tax.) Tribune," and Charles Coleman, of Reaumont, Tex., confirmed the story of Sergeant McCloud, and said: "We had insufficient food and water, and if it had not been for the kindness of the men in the hospital part of the ship we would have had not been for the kindness of the men in the hospital part of the ship we would have had not and took every opportunity to curse us."

AN EXTRAORDINARY ORDER.

These men also told a story of an experience of Sergeant Lenihan, of Captain Merrill's company. They said that while at Key West Mertoo long, and ordered him to have it cut. Lenihan did so, but it did not suit Captain Merrill, who gave the sergeant orders to have it cut still shorter. This the sergeant did. Still the captain was dissatisfied, and, with a string of onths, according to the Texas men, he expressed his opinion of Lenihan. The sergeant replied that he could not cut the hair any shorter, and as a result of this reply Captain Merrill had him ourt-martialled and sentenced to six months imprisonment. When the papers were submitted to Brigadier-General Pennington for approval they came back indorsed. In considera-tion of the exceedingly abusive language used by Captain Merrill, the sentence is reduced to a fine of $1."

As the boat with the newspaper reporters left the San Marcos the men for once disobeyed Captain Merrill's order, and standing on the deck, gave vent to a cheer which was loud and
